SURVIVORS RESCUED.

The statement makes reference to some survivors rescued from the Gneisenau and the Leipzig."

The statement makes reference to some survivors rescued from the Gneisenau and the Leipzig, but no mention is made of any of the crew of the Scharnhorst, which was the flagship of the German admiral, being saved and it is thus presumed that Count von Spee, his officers and men went down fighting.

The British casualities were light, but beyond the fact that the British squadron was commanded by Vice-Admiral Sturdee no information is vouchasted regarding the ships engaged and the newspapers are enjoined not to speculate as "other combinations may be effected."

The greatest enthusiasm prevails in London over the victory and the general impression is that it will be completed as the Admiralty would not likely send ships that could not overtake the Dresden and Nuernberg, which are 24-knot and 23-knot vensels respectively and probably even slower after their long service. They are at a disadvantage also because of their small coal capacity.

The British squadron which engaged the Germans left England without the knowledge of the general public and until his name was mentioned it was believed that Vice-Admiral Sturdee was serving in home waters. The fact that he was taken from the pest of chief of the determination of the British government to clear the Parific and South Atlantic of all German warship. It is believed, therefore, that the British commander is at the head of a formidable squadron.

In addition to the Dresden and Nuernberg only one German warship—the Karlsruhe—is now unaccounted for in those waters, although there may be one or two armed merchantmen which the allies have not rounded up.

Britain declared war on Germany the cruiser Leipzig was lying at anchor in the harbor of Mazatian, alongside the British sloop of war Algering; the Nurnberg was on her way from San Francisco, where she had coaled July 16, to Honolulu, and the Gneiseanau, Scharnborst and Dresden, with the Emden, were at the German navabase of Tsing-tao.

The story of how they finally comeanirated in strength sufficient to defeat Sir Christopher Cradock off Coronel, Chile, is full of twists and turns. The three special trains bearing the Sixth Artillery are expected to leave El Paso early tomorrow. Beautiful Gifts in Leather

There are two distinct advantages in buying leather goods at this shop. One is that you know exactly what you are buying—there is no mystery about it at all. The other is the quality of every-thing in the store—fine leather, beautiful workmanship, hastdsome linings and fittings.

A gift of leather from this store is a thing that will be used for many Christmases to come. Because it is good leather, it will be handsome as long as it is used.

Our many gifts in leather include a large number that are especially for men, 8thers especially for women, and a multitude that will do equally well for either.

The price range appeals to your purse, no matter what size that is. Many of our attractive small articles are priced between 75c and $3,00—just the figures that interest you for the bulk of the gifts on your Christmas List. Costlier things are here for the costlier gifts you are thinking of.

The shop itself will offer you a thousand suggestions and solutions for the Christmas list that always grows longer and harder to handle as Christmas nears. There's a courteous, friendly feeling here that you'll like, too-and very prompt attention.

Keep the list-in the center here for refe and come in just as soon as possible. You can begin to enjoy Christmas yourself after your shop-best-known young men and women of Los Angeles.

It was Mr. Jewell's fondness for showing his friends a good time that indirectly led to his untimely end. On the night of December 16, 1910, he gave a big party at his home on Maltman avenue, which is now the bone of contention in Mrs. Jewell's suit. Late in the night he essayed to take his guests for a ride and in his big, expensive automobile started for the central portion of town. En route the machine collided with a milk wagon, the car being demolished, some of his friends more or less hurt, and he so seriously injured that he died four days afterward, never regaining consciousness.

EXCHANGE IS NO ROBBERY.

There have been traders ever since the notable day on which the hairy and hunsry Essu swapped his birthright for a pot of sausage—or something like that. The Phoenicians of forty centuries ago were a hardy bunch of adventurers in the trading line and sent their acows over uncharted seas, swapping purple neckties for beads of virgin gold.

In this country the pioneer traders followed the redskins into the wilderness and exchanged stone jugs of Holland gin for priceless ofter pelts. Almost always the trader—as he designated himself, had the better of the bargain, unless the Indian grew peevish and took his scalp for boot. But as the country began to thicken up in population and trader came to meet trader, the sparks 'gan to fly. Not very far back our forefathers were much given to swapping horses, but in a general way trading was confined to certain standards or staples and a comprehensive scheme of exchanges was not yet attained.

But it is different now.

Today there are several thousand keen and convincing citizens who gain a large portion of their livelihood through a swift and sweeping consideration of the classified advertising columns of the daily press and a tactful personal use of the same. Almost everything of value in this wide, wide world is effered for exchange in some form and we have become a community of traders. The man who has alightly wearied of his orange grove is content to swap the same for an apartment-house in the city, and lo! the city man has been wild to pluck the golden fruit from his own trees all the time. The man with a West Side bungalow figures that he might be cutting the finest alfalfa on the coast and so a deal is presently contrived by which a former alfalfa prince becomes a city resident. They even trade their church pews in the reckoning. All parties express themselves as satisfied and probably commissions are paid on both sides of the transaction. The trader is the genial being who brings together two persons having toys of which they have tited and makes each eager to bart

C. F. Harvey, arrested Wednesday night, is said to have confessed to the police regarding his share in a well-organised plan to rob garages in the outlying towns by obtaining tires and automobile supplies under false pretenses. A complaint charging embesselement will probably be issued against Harvey today.
